Questions to Ask Us:

- What specific experience do you have with capital raising or M&A transactions in my industry?
- How will you tailor your services to meet the unique needs of my business?
- Can you provide examples of similar transactions you have successfully completed?

What fees will I pay?

Our fees are transaction-based, meaning you will pay fees each time you engage in a capital raising or M&A transaction with us. These fees are milestone-based success fees, which means they are tied to specific milestones achieved during the transaction process.

Fee Structure

- Upfront initial consulting fees
- Milestone-based success fees
- Some fees may be based on a percentage of the overall transaction value

The fees can vary depending on the complexity, size, and type of transaction. We will provide you with a detailed fee schedule before you engage in any transaction, so you understand the costs involved.

Questions to Ask Us:

- Can you explain the fee structure in detail?
- Are there any additional costs I should be aware of?
- How are fees calculated for different types of transactions?

What are your legal obligations to me when acting as my financial advisor? How does your firm make money and what are the potential conflicts of interest that you may have?

Since we do not provide investment advice or services, we do not provide recommendations. However, the way we make money may still create some conflicts with your interests. You should understand and ask us about these conflicts because they can affect the services we provide you. Here are some examples to help you understand what this means:

- Transaction Volume: Each time you undergo a transaction, we will be paid according to the terms of the engagement letter for that specific transaction. Since capital raising and M&A activities are not frequent for most companies, the risk of conflicts due to transaction volume is limited.
- Transaction Size: Success fees are often based on the size of the overall transaction. Larger transactions might result in higher fees, but given the infrequent nature of these activities, this risk is also limited.

Questions to Ask Us:

- How do you manage potential conflicts of interest?
- Can you provide examples of how you have handled conflicts in the past?
- What measures do you take to ensure my interests are prioritized?

How do your financial professionals make money?

The firm is compensated based on the milestone-based success fees generated from the transactions its clients execute. This means our earnings are tied to the volume and size of the transactions we facilitate. Our financial professionals are compensated according to a specific compensation arrangement that includes a base salary and discretionary bonus. Part of that discretionary bonus is tied to how well we do overall as a Firm. This compensation structure may create potential conflicts of interest, as there may be an incentive to recommend more frequent or larger transactions.

However, since capital raising and M&A activities are not frequent for most companies, these conflicts are less likely to impact our services. We are committed to transparency and will always strive to act in your best interest.

Questions to Ask Us:

- How are your financial professionals compensated?
- Are there any incentives for recommending certain types of transactions?
- How do you ensure that my interests are aligned with those of your financial professionals?

Do you or your financial professionals have legal or disciplinary history?

No. None of our financial professionals have any legal or disciplinary history. You can visit www.investor.gov/CRS for a free and simple search tool to research our firm and our financial professionals.

Questions to Ask Us:

- How can I find out more about the legal and disciplinary history of your firm and professionals?
- What steps do you take to ensure compliance with regulatory requirements?
